Course Description:

In an ELL Classroom, students have repeated opportunities to work with strong reading strategies in stories, poetry, expository non-fiction, and many other kinds of texts. Students also get a chance to explore how particular texts work through each unit's genre focus. This course is designed to help students see that English is about something important. Our units are built around essential questions. EQ are the deep and abiding questions we all face as we think about our lives.

The texts selected for this course, are enabling texts. First, they serve as the vehicle for exploring essential questions, but secondly, the texts are diverse. From classics that have inspired readers for decades to contemporary fiction that reflects the diversity of the U.S. The texts are also diverse in subject matter and genre, exploring issues of personal identity as well as cultural and social movements.

The reading comprehension strategies taught in this course provide students rich and meaningful opportunities to take control of their reading. It shows students that reading proficiently is not a matter of being innately smart but, in part, a matter of applying appropriate strategies. During this course, students receive instruction that help them become more competent and compelling writers. Those abilities are crucially important both in and out of school.

Cooperative Learning strategies are a vital resource for promoting secondary students' acquisition of both challenging academic content and language. These strategies promote active engagement and social motivation for all students, but for English Language Learners, they create opportunities for purposeful communication. Such strategies will be use in the ELL classroom.

Classroom Expectations:

- BE Responsible
- BE Respectful
- BE Positive
- Make the most of every moment
 - Participate to gain the most value
- Do what it takes
 - Get as much as you can
- Remain Open
 - Consider the possibilities

This classroom is a safe classroom. That means that no one should ever feel judged, in danger, or lost. We are a family and it is my expectation that everyone treats everyone else that way.

Student Evaluation:

Every day, students provide evidence of their learning through informal discussions, journals, speeches, essays, seminars and projects. The vast majority of the course assessments/grading/feedback offer information for both students and teacher. We use this information to determine what has been learned and to guide specific instruction. The primary purpose of feedback is to improve learning and does not need an assigned traditional grade.

This year we are continuing a new grading approach to better reflect student learning and achievement. Grades are intended to inform students, parents, and others “about learning successes and to guide improvements when needed” (Guskey & Jung 2013). Thus, we will not be using a traditional points-based system. Instead, letter grades will be determined by skills-based rubrics which assess academic achievement.

It is our hope that you review this approach with your parent so that we can all discuss any questions and concerns that you may have.

Rationale:

1. Research indicates students worry about amassing minimal points for a grade rather than on learning. We prefer to help students focus on close, analytical reading and on interesting, effective writing.
2. Grades too often reflect what students are trying to learn, rather than their ultimate mastery. It is more just and useful formally to assess only a few assignments designed to allow students to demonstrate mastery of skills and concepts.
3. It is more effective to help students use assessments to diagnose what they need to work on and to demonstrate what they have achieved. Assignments used for feedback will not receive letter grades. This does not mean that such assignments are inconsequential; they are seminal in providing students with opportunities to develop as readers, writers, and thinkers.

Students will receive rubrics for reading, writing, speaking and listening assignments as well as academic behaviors.

Major assignments and summative grades will receive the following marks:

4 —As this grade reflects excellent, above and beyond the everyday, achievement in the class, it will be awarded to students who demonstrate high achievement in the major skills categories. Such achievement cannot be demonstrated if there is work missing or if work is consistently or egregiously late.

3 —As this grade reflects satisfactory, thorough achievement in the class, it will be awarded to students who demonstrate competence in the major skills categories. Such achievement cannot be demonstrated if there is major work missing or if work is consistently or egregiously late.

2 —As this grade reflects basic achievement in the class, it will be awarded to students who demonstrate limited competence in the major skills categories. Such achievement cannot be demonstrated if there is significant work missing.

1 —As this grade reflects minimal achievement in the class, it will be awarded to students who have demonstrated inadequate competence but have put in a good faith effort. Such achievement cannot be demonstrated if major assignments are missing.

0 —As this grade reflects minimal to no evidence of achievement in the class, it will be awarded to students who have demonstrated little to no proficiency in the major skills and have not put forth a good faith effort. Major assignments are missing (“M” will be used for major assignments to reflect a Missing assignment).

Assignments used for practice, feedback and evidence of learning will receive the following marks (see specific rubrics for detailed explanation):

M Missing
R Rethink
T Turned In
